

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This extract is dedicated in the name of those, who helped and guided me to build a strong foundation in this particular sphere of sociological and Anthropological studies. Their kind help and suggestion turn my dream to reality.

I express my deep sense of gratitude to Dr. V.P. Singh, Reader in Sociology Assam University, Silchar, for his able guidance without which the study could not be possible.

I express my sincere gratitude to Prof. P.M. Chacko my co-guide and former, Head, Department of Sociology, Assam University, Silchar for his valuable advice to undertake the subject, I am thankful to Dr. G. Ram, Reader, Department of Sociology, Assam University, Silchar as his suggestions. I am personally thankful to Prof. J.B. Bhattacharjee, former Vice-Chancellor of Assam University, Silchar for his kind cooperation.

I owe my special thanks to all the villagers of the three study villages. Mention may be made of Sunil Barman of Kumacherra village Smt. Prava Rani Barman of Nikama village and Sudarshan Barman of Dormikhal village for their continuous help and interest. Dilip Fonglosa and staff of ITDP also help me a lot. They also helped me to take some photographs of crucial events of Barman rites and rituals regarding marriage.

As the present work is mainly based on field work where data collection is an important part of the study Mr. Santosh Kr.

Gupta (A.C.S) project Director of ITDP Silchar and his staff helped me a lot, without their kind cooperation data collection was not possible. His department provided me some valuable documents and information on Barman tribe.

My special thanks go to Tribal Development Division, Ministry of Social Welfare New Delhi for their kind financial help, otherwise it was difficult to conduct the field survey in rural areas where huge amount of money required.

I am thankful to Mr. Biswajyoti Barman of All India Radio Silchar for his kind co-operation. Last but not least I am thankful to Mr. Sandip Choudhury, Mr. Bishwajit Roy and Mr. Debangshu Chakraborty for sparing lots of time on their Computer for my typing work.
